Technology Benefits for Care Homes

Technology is becoming an ever-increasing presence in our daily lives, yet the elderly have missed out of this technology revolution.

Technology can vastly improve the health and wellbeing of the elderly in care homes.

Many people worry their relatives will become isolated and immobile in a care home, therefore reliant on staff members or family visits for any contact. Introducing care homes to technology such as Skype an app created to communicate with voice and video to connect with loved ones across the world can help care home residents become more interactive and maintain a sense of connection beyond the care home.

All tables can access 'Remind Me Care' which is world leading Person-centred care, Activities and Companionship software.

'For care at home, the elderly, dementia, learning disabilities or cognitive impairment'.

Remind Me Care is an app exercising person centered care, activities and companionship software, which is National Institute for Health and Care Excellence compliant. This software stores personal likes, dislikes, history, specific care details and more-which can be accessed through the app by family members and friends in a GDPR compliant manner.

All of our Tiny Tablet Apps provide, sensory and learning apps to engage the brain and maintain focus. We have a wide range of apps catering for person centred care as all residents will find something that excites and liberates them on the tablet, whether that be learning, dancing or watching.
